The Kiwanis Kids Idea Studio has interactive structures to keep little hands and minds busy in a “children’s museum” type style. It will make you rethink how a library can allow your kids to interact and still learn. Kids will find air tubes, magnetic ramps, and other opportunities to explore kinetic energy, friction, and inertia, but don’t worry they will never guess they are learning – but they are! There will be a projection wall, LEGO wall, microscope, and virtual reality station all ready to jump start their imaginations. A town area that will include a market with toy groceries, a veterinarian and a house with furniture and accessories so kids can play over and over again coming up with new stories each time.
